

CHAPTER X

Christ our Savior Celebrates the Last Supper with His Disciples in Fulfillment of the Law, and He Washes Their Feet; His Most Holy Mother by Her Celestial Vision Receives Knowledge and Takes Notice of All These Mysteries.

445. Our Redeemer proceeded on his way to Jerusalem, as I said above (438), in the afternoon of the Thursday preceding his Passion and Death. During their conversation on the way, while He instructed them in the approaching mysteries, the Apostles proposed their doubts and difficulties and He, as the Teacher of wisdom and as a loving Father, answered them in words which sweetly penetrated into their very hearts, for having always loved them* He, like a divine Swan, in these last hours of his life, manifested his love with so much the greater force of amiable sweetness in his voice and manner. The knowledge of his impending Passion and the prospect of his great torments not only did not hinder Him in the manifestations of his love, but just as fire is more concentrated by the frost, so his love broke forth with so much the greater force at the prospect of these sufferings. In this way the conflagration of divine love which burned without limit in the Heart of our most loving Jesus issued forth to overpower by its penetrating activity first those who were nearest to Him, and then also those who sought to extinguish it forever. Excepting Christ and his Blessed Mother, the rest of us mortals are ordinarily roused to resentment by injury, or dismayed and disgusted by adversity, and we deem it a great thing not to revenge ourselves on those who offend us; but the love of the divine Master was not daunted by the impending ignominies of his Passion, nor dampened by the ignorance of his Apostles and the disloyalty which He was so soon to experience from them.

446. The Apostles asked Him where He desired to celebrate the Paschal supper (Mt. 26:17), for on that Thursday night the Jews were to partake of the lamb of the Passover, a most notable and solemn national feast. Though of all their feasts this eating of the paschal lamb was the most prophetic and significant of the Messiah and the mysteries connected with Him and his work, the Apostles were as yet scarcely aware of its intimate connection with Christ. The divine Master answered by sending St. Peter and St. John to Jerusalem to make arrangements for the paschal lamb. This was to be in a house where they would see a servant enter with a jug of water, and whose master they were to request in the name of Christ to prepare a room for his Last Supper with his disciples. This rich man was a resident of Jerusalem, illustrious and devoted to the Savior, one of those who believed in his miracles and doctrine, and due to his pious devotion he merited that the Author of life chose his house in order to sanctify it by the mysteries He was to enact there, thus consecrating it as a sacred temple for others who would follow afterwards. The two Apostles immediately departed on their commission, and following the instructions they petitioned the owner of this house that he might admit into it the Master of life and grant Him his hospitality so He could celebrate within it the great solemnity of the Unleavened Bread, also called the Pasch.

447. The heart of this householder was enlightened by special grace and he readily offered his dwelling with all the necessary furniture for celebrating the supper according to the law. He assigned to them a very large hall (Lk. 22:12), appropriately tapestried and adorned for the mysteries which, unknown to him and to the Apostles, the Lord was to celebrate therein. After due preparation had thus been made the Savior and the other Apostles arrived at this dwelling. His most blessed Mother and the holy women in her company came soon after. Upon entering the most humble Queen prostrated Herself on the floor and adored her divine Son as usual, asking his blessing and begging Him to inform Her what She was to do. He bade Her go to another room where She would be able to see all that was done on this night according to the decrees of divine Providence, and where She was to console and instruct, as far as was proper, the holy women of her company. The great Lady obeyed and retired with her companions. She exhorted them to persevere in faith and prayer, while She, knowing the hour of her Holy Communion was at hand, continued to keep her interior vision riveted on the doings of her most holy Son and her preparation for the worthy reception of his body and blood.

448. His most holy Mother having retired, our Lord and Master Jesus with his Apostles and disciples took their places to celebrate the feast of the lamb. He observed all the ceremonies of the law as prescribed by Himself through Moses (Ex. 12:3ff.). During this Last Supper He gave to the Apostles an understanding of all the ceremonies of that figurative law as observed by the Patriarchs and Prophets in order to signify the truth of what the Lord himself had fulfilled and had yet to accomplish as Repairer of the world; that the ancient law of Moses and its figures would be evacuated by its true fulfillment; that the shadows could no longer endure since the light and beginning of the new law of grace had arrived, which alone would be the permanent foundation of the precepts of the natural law, which was perpetual, though these precepts had been greatly enhanced and perfected by other divine precepts and counsels He himself had taught; that by the efficacy He would give to the new Sacraments of his new law all the figures of the ancient law of Moses were abrogated as being ineffectual and only figurative; and for all this He was celebrating with them this Last Supper by which He terminated and put an end to the rites and obligations of the old law, since all its precepts had been directed to prepare and represent that which His Majesty was accomplishing, and hence having attained its end had now become useless.

449. This instruction enlightened the Apostles concerning the deep mysteries of this Last Supper. The other disciples who were present did not understand these mysteries as thoroughly as the Apostles. Judas attended to and understood them least of all, yea not at all, for he was possessed by avarice, thinking only of his prearranged treason and occupied with how he could execute it with secrecy. The Lord revealed none of his secret treachery, for so it was appropriate to his equity and to the dispositions of his most high judgments. He did not desire to exclude him from the supper and from the other mysteries, leaving it to his own wickedness to bring about his exclusion. The divine Master always treated him as his disciple, Apostle and minister, and was careful of his honor. Thus He taught the children of the Church by his own example with what veneration they must treat his ministers and priests, how they must guard their honor and avoid speaking of their sins and weaknesses, still adhering to frail human nature in spite of their high office. None of them will ever be worse than Judas, as we can well assume, and not one of the faithful will ever be like Christ our Lord and Savior, nor as our faith teaches us will anyone ever have his divine authority and power. Hence as all men are of infinitely smaller consideration than our Savior, let them accord to his ministers, who though wicked will ever be better than Judas, the same treatment as He condescended to accord to this most wicked disciple and Apostle. This duty toward priests is not less urgent even in superiors, for also Christ our Lord, who bore with Judas and was so careful of his reputation, was infinitely his superior.

450. On this occasion the Redeemer composed a new canticle by which He exalted the eternal Father for having in his Son fulfilled the figures of the old law and for thus advancing the glory of his holy Name. Prostrate upon the earth He humiliated Himself in his humanity before God, confessing, adoring and praising the Divinity as infinitely superior to his humanity. Then addressing the eternal Father He gave vent to the burning affection of his Heart in the following sublime prayer, saying:

451. "My eternal Father and infinite God, thy divine and eternal will resolved to create this my human nature so I would be the Head of all those who are predestined for thy glory and happiness (Rom. 8:29), and who are to attain their true blessedness by availing themselves of my works. For this purpose, and in order to redeem them from the fall of Adam, I have lived with them thirty-three years. Now, my Lord and Father, the opportune and acceptable hour for fulfilling thy eternal will has arrived, the greatness of thy holy Name is about to be revealed to men, and thy incomprehensible Divinity, through holy faith, is to be made known and exalted among all nations. It is time for the seven sealed book to be opened, which thy wisdom has delivered to Me (Apoc. 5:7), and for Me to give a happy end to the ancient figures and sacrifices of animals, which have signified the sacrifice (Heb. 10:1) which I desire to offer now voluntarily of Myself for my brethren, the children of Adam, for the members of this body of which I am Head, and for the sheep of thy flock, for whom I beseech Thee in this hour to look down with eyes of mercy. If in the past thy anger has been placated by these ancient figures and sacrifices which I am now about to abrogate, let it now, my Father, be entirely extinguished, since I am ready to offer Myself in voluntary sacrifice to die for men on the cross and give Myself as a holocaust of my love (Eph. 5:2). O Lord, let the rigor of thy justice be relaxed, and look upon the human race with eyes of mercy. Let Us institute a new law for men by which they may throw down the bars of their disobedience and open for themselves the gates of heaven. Let them now find a free road and open portals for entering with Me upon the vision of thy Divinity, as many of them as shall follow my footsteps and obey my law."

452. The eternal Father graciously received this prayer of our Redeemer and sent innumerable hosts of his angelic courtiers to assist at the wonderful works which Christ was to perform in that place. While this happened in the Cenacle most holy Mary in her retreat was raised to highest contemplation in which She witnessed all that passed as if She was present; thus She was enabled to cooperate and correspond as a most faithful Coadjutrix, enlightened by the highest wisdom. By heroic and celestial acts of virtue She imitated the doings of Christ our Savior, for all of them awakened fitting resonance in her bosom and caused a mysterious and divine echo of like petitions and prayers in the sweetest Virgin; moreover, She composed new and admirable canticles of praise for all the sacred humanity of Christ was now about to accomplish in obedience to the divine will and in accordance and fulfillment of the figures of the written law.

453. Very wonderful and worthy of all admiration would it be for us, as it was for the holy Angels and as it will be for all the Blessed, if we could understand the divine harmony of the works and virtues in the Heart of our great Queen, which like a heavenly chorus neither confused nor hindered each other in their superabundance on this occasion. Being filled with the intelligence of which I have spoken, She was sensible of the mysterious fulfillment and accomplishment of the legal ceremonies and figures of the old law through the most noble and efficacious Sacraments of the new. She gazed upon the vast fruits of the Redemption in the predestined; the ruin of the reprobate; the exaltation of the Name of God and of the most holy humanity of her Son Jesus; the universal announcement and faith in the Divinity which the Lord himself was preparing for the world; that heaven had been closed for so many ages, so from now on the children of Adam could enter it through the establishment and progress of the new evangelical Church and all of its mysteries; and how of all this her most holy Son was the admirable and most prudent Artificer, with the praise and admiration of all the courtiers of heaven. For these magnificent results, without forgetting the least of them, She now blessed the eternal Father and rendered Him ineffable gratitude in the consolation and jubilation of her soul.

454. However, She also reflected how all these admirable works were to cost her divine Son the sorrows, ignominies, affronts and torments of his Passion, and at last the death of the cross, so hard and bitter, all of which He was to endure in the very humanity He had received from Her, while at the same time so many of the children of Adam for whom He suffered would ungratefully waste the copious fruit of the Redemption. This knowledge filled with bitter sorrow the most sincere Heart of the pious Mother; yet since She was a living and faithful reproduction of her most holy Son, all these sentiments and operations found room in her magnanimous and expanded Heart, and therefore She was not disturbed or dismayed, nor did She fail to console and instruct her companions, but without losing touch of her high intelligences She descended to their level of thought in her words of consolation and eternal life for their instruction. O admirable Instructress and superhuman example entirely to be followed and imitated! It is true that in comparison with this sea of grace and light our prerogatives dwindle into insignificance; but it is also true that our sufferings and trials in comparison with hers are so to say only imaginary and not worthy to be even noticed, since She suffered more than all the children of Adam together. Yet neither in order to imitate Her, nor for our eternal welfare, can we be induced to suffer with patience even the least adversity. All of them excite and dismay us and take away our composure; we give vent to our passions; we angrily resist and are consumed with restless sorrow; in our stubbornness we lose our reason, give free reign to evil movements, and hasten on toward the cliff. Even good fortune lures us into destruction, and so no reliance can be placed on our infected and spoiled nature. Let us remember our heavenly Mistress on these occasions in order to repair our disorders.

455. Having completed the legal supper and fully instructed his disciples, Christ our Savior, as St. John tells us (Jn. 13:4), arose from the table in order to wash their feet. He first addressed another prayer to the Father, prostrating Himself in his presence, of the type He had made during the supper. This prayer was not vocal but mental, saying: "Eternal Father, Creator of the universe, I am thy image and the figure of thy substance, engendered by thy intellect (Heb. 1:3). Having offered Myself for the Redemption of the world through my Passion and Death according to thy will, I now desire to enter upon these sacraments and mysteries by humiliating Myself to the dust, so the pride of Lucifer may be confounded by the humility of thy Onlybegotten. In order to leave an example of humility to my Apostles and to my Church, which must be built up on the secure foundation of this virtue, I desire, my Father, to wash the feet of my disciples, including the least of all of them, Judas, steeped in his own malice. I shall prostrate Myself before him in deepest and most sincere self-abasement to offer him my friendship and salvation. Though he is my greatest enemy among mortals, I shall not refuse him pardon for his treachery, nor deny him kindest treatment, so if he shall decline to accept it all the world may know that I have opened up to him the arms of my mercy, yet he repelled my advances with obstinate contempt."

456. Such was the prayer of the Savior in preparing to wash the feet of his disciples. There are not words or similes in all creation which could properly express the divine impetus of the love with which He undertook and accomplished these works of mercy, for in comparison to it the activity of fire is but slow, the inflowing of the tide but weak, the tendency of a stone toward its center but tardy, and all the forces of the elements in the world that we can imagine in their united activity but inadequate representations of the power of his love. But we cannot fail to perceive that divine love and Wisdom alone could ever conceive a humiliation by which both the Divinity and his sacred humanity lowered themselves beneath the feet of mere creatures, and beneath the feet of the worst of them, Judas; that He who is the Word of the eternal Father, the Saint of saints, the essential Goodness, the King of kings and Lord of lords, prostrated Himself before the most wicked of men and touched the feet of this most impure and degraded of his creatures with his lips; and that He did all this merely for the chance of justifying his wayward disciple and securing for him immeasurable blessings.

457. The Master arose from his prayer, and his countenance beaming with peace and serenity commanded his disciples to seat themselves like persons of superior station, while He himself remained standing as if He were their servant. Then He laid aside the mantle which He wore over the seamless tunic, which went all the way down to his feet, though not covering them. On this occasion He wore sandals, which He had worn ever since his most holy Mother had put them on his feet in Egypt; however, He sometimes had dispensed with them on his preaching tours. They grew in size with his feet as He advanced in age, as I have already remarked (Inc. 691). Having laid aside this mantle, which was the garment spoken of by the Evangelist (Jn. 13:4), He girded his body with one end of a large towel, permitting the other part to hang down free. He then poured water into a basin for washing the feet of the Apostles (Ib. 5), who were wonderingly observing the proceedings of their divine Master.

458. He first approached the head of the Apostles, St. Peter. But when this excitable Apostle saw prostrate at his feet the Lord whom he had acknowledged and proclaimed as the Son of God, being again renewed and enlightened in his faith and overcome by humiliation at his own insignificance, he said (Ib. 6): Lord, dost Thou wash my feet? The Author of life answered him with some earnestness: What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter (Ib. 7). This was the same as to say to him: Obey now first my command and will, and do not prefer thy will before mine, disturbing and perverting the order of virtues. Before all thou must yield captive thy understanding and believe that what I do is proper; then, having believed and obeyed, thou shalt understand the hidden mysteries of my doings, into the knowledge of which thou must enter by obedience. Without obedience thou canst not be truly humble, but only presumptuous; nor can thy humility take preference over mine, for I have humiliated Myself unto death (Philip. 2:8), and in order to thus humiliate Myself I have sought the way of obedience; but thou, who art my disciple, dost not follow my doctrine. Under color of humility thou art disobedient, and by thus perverting the right order of virtues thou dost strip thyself of humility as well as obedience, following thy own presumptuous judgment.

459. St. Peter did not understand this doctrine contained in the first answer of our Lord, for though he belonged to his school he had not yet experienced the divine effects of this washing and contact. Hindered by the indiscreet affection of his presumptuous humility, he answered the Lord: "I shall never consent, Lord, that Thou wash my feet" (Jn. 13:8). But the Lord of life answered with greater severity (Ib.): If I wash thee not, thou shalt have no part with Me. By this threatening answer the Lord sanctioned obedience forever as the secure way. According to human insight St. Peter certainly had some excuse for being slow in permitting God to prostrate Himself before an earthly and sinful man as he was, and allow Him, whom he had so recently acknowledged and adored as his Creator, to perform such an unheard-of act of self-abasement. But his opposition was not excusable in the eyes of the divine Master, who could not err in what He desired to do; for whenever there is not an evident error in what is commanded, obedience must be blind and without evasion. In this mystery the Lord desired to repair the disobedience of our first parents Adam and Eve by which sin entered into the world (Rom. 5:19); and due to the similarity and relation between it and the disobedience of St. Peter, our Lord threatened him with a similar punishment, telling him that if he did not obey he would have no part in Him, namely that he would be excluded from the merits and fruits of the Redemption by which alone we become worthy of his friendship and glory. He also threatened to deprive him of participation in his body and blood which He was now about to perpetuate in the sacramental species of bread and wine. The Savior gave him to understand that however ardently He desired to communicate Himself not only in part but entirely, yet disobedience would certainly deprive even the Apostle of this blessing.

460. By this threat of Christ our Lord, St. Peter was so chastened and instructed that he immediately submitted from his whole heart and said: Lord, not only my feet, but also my hands and my head (Jn. 13:9), as if to say: I offer my feet in order to walk in obedience, my hands in order to exercise it, and my head in order to surrender all of my own judgment that may be contrary to its dictates. The Lord accepted this submission of St. Peter and said (Ib. 10): He that is washed needeth not but to wash his feet, but is clean wholly. And you are clean, but not all (for among them was the most unclean Judas). This Christ said because the disciples (except Judas) had been justified and made clean by his doctrines, and it was necessary only to wash the imperfections and slight or venial sins in order to approach Holy Communion with greater integrity and disposition as is required in order to participate fully in its divine effects and receive its abundant graces with so much the greater efficacy and plenitude, for venial sins, distractions and lukewarmness hinder all these benefits very much. Thereupon the feet of St. Peter were washed, as also those of the other disciples, who permitted it in great astonishment and bathed in tears, for all of them were filled with new enlightenment and gifts of grace.

461. The divine Master then proceeded to wash also the feet of Judas, whose perfidious treason could not prevent the charity of Christ from secretly bestowing upon him tokens of even greater charity than upon the other Apostles. Without permitting it to be noticed by the others, He manifested his special love toward Judas in two ways; the first, in the kind and caressing manner in which He approached him, knelt at his feet, washed them, kissed them, and pressed them to his bosom; and the other, by seeking to move his soul with inspirations proportionate to the dire depravity of his conscience, for the assistance offered to Judas was in itself much greater than that offered to the other Apostles. But since his disposition was very wicked, his vices deeply ingrown upon him, and his understanding and his faculties much disturbed and weakened, and since he had entirely forsaken God and delivered himself over to the demon, possessing him in his heart as upon a throne and seat of his wickedness, he resisted all the divine advances and inspirations connected with this washing of his feet. He was moreover harassed by the fear of breaking his contract with the Pharisees and scribes. Hence at the bodily presence of Christ, and by the interior force of the helps and light by which Christ sought to move his understanding, there arose in his darkened conscience a turbulent storm which filled him with confusion and bitterness, and inflamed him with anger, enraging him and whirling him still farther away from his Master and Physician, and converting the salutary medicine He desired to apply into deadly venom and the most bitter gall of wickedness with which he was filled and possessed.

462. Thus did the malice of Judas resist the saving contact of those divine hands in which the eternal Father had placed miraculous power to enrich all creatures with his blessings (Jn. 13:3). Even if he had not received any other assistance except that naturally flowing from the visible and personal presence of the Author of life, the wickedness of this unhappy disciple would have been beyond all bounds. The bodily appearance of Christ our Good was most perfect and attractive. His countenance, serenely dignified yet sweetly expressive and beautiful, was framed in abundant waves of golden chestnut hair, freely growing after the manner of the Nazarenes; his frank and open eyes beamed forth grace and majesty; his mouth, nose, and all the features of his face exhibited the most perfect proportion; and his whole Person was clothed in such entrancing loveliness that He drew upon Himself the loving veneration of all who beheld Him without malice in their hearts. Over and above all this the mere sight of Him caused in the beholders an interior joy and enlightenment, engendering heavenly thoughts and sentiments in the soul. Judas now saw this so amiable and venerable Person of Christ at his feet, striving to please him by new tokens of affection and seeking to gain him by new impulses of love. But so great was the perversity of Judas that nothing could move or soften his hardened heart; on the contrary, he was irritated by the gentleness of the Savior, and he refused to look upon his face or take notice of his actions, for from the time in which he had lost faith and grace he was filled with hatred toward his Master and his heavenly Mother, and never looked them in the face. Greater in a certain respect was the terror of Lucifer at the presence of Christ our Savior, for this demon, having established himself in the heart of Judas, could not bear the humility of the divine Master toward his disciples and sought to escape from Judas and from the Cenacle; but the Lord detained him by his almighty power so his pride would be crushed. Yet later on he was cast out from that place (478-9), filled with fury and the suspicion that Christ might after all be the true God.

463. The Lord completed the washing of the feet, and again assuming his mantle seated Himself in the midst of his Apostles and began the discourse recorded by St. John (13:12ff.): Know you what I have done to you? You call me Master, and Lord; and you say well, for so I am. If then I being your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; you also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have given you an example, that as I have done to you, so you do also. Amen, Amen, I say to you: The servant is not greater than his lord; neither is the Apostle greater than He that sent him. Then the Lord proceeded to propound great mysteries and truths which I will not expatiate upon, but for which I refer the reader to the Gospels. This discourse still further enlightened the Apostles in the mysteries of the most blessed Trinity and the Incarnation, and prepared them by new graces for the Holy Eucharist, confirming them in their understanding of the vast significance of his doctrines and miracles. Among them all St. Peter and St. John were most fully enlightened, but each of the Apostles received more or less insight according to his disposition and the divine will. What St. John refers to regarding the question he asked of Christ at the request of St. Peter about who the traitor was who would sell Him, and the understanding which His Majesty himself accordingly gave him, happened at the supper when St. John reclined on the bosom of his divine Master (Jn. 13:23ff.). St. Peter desired to know this in order to avenge or impede the treason due to the fervor which inflamed his bosom, and to manifest above all his love of Christ, which he was accustomed to do. But St. John, though he recognized the traitor by the bread dipped into the sauce and handed to Judas, would not inform St. Peter. He alone knew the secret, but taught by the charity which he had acquired in the school of his divine Master he buried the secret in his bosom.

464. While St. John thus reclined on the bosom of Jesus our Savior he was privileged in many other ways, for there he was made to see many most exalted mysteries of the divinity and humanity of Christ, and many mysteries of the Queen of heaven and most holy Mother of God. Also on this occasion he was commissioned to take charge of Her, for on the Cross Christ did not say to him: She shall be thy Mother, nor thou shalt be her son, but behold thy Mother (Jn. 19:27), because this was not a matter resolved upon at that time, but one which was then to be made manifest publicly as having been ordained and decreed beforehand. Regarding all these sacraments connected with the washing of the feet and the words and discourses of her Son his most pure Mother was minutely informed by interior vision, as I have said in other places, and for all of them She rendered gratitude and gave glory to the Most High. And when afterwards the wonderful works of the Lord were accomplished She beheld them not as one ignorant of them, but as one who saw fulfilled what She had known beforehand and what had been recorded in her Heart like the law recorded on the tablets of Moses. She also enlightened her companions concerning all that was proper, reserving whatever they were not capable of understanding.

INSTRUCTION WHICH THE GREAT MISTRESS OF THE WORLD, MARY MOST HOLY, GAVE ME.

465. My daughter, in three virtues mentioned by thee in this chapter as especially practiced by my Son and Lord I desire thee to be particularly zealous as his spouse and my beloved disciple. They are the virtues of charity, humility and obedience, in which His Majesty desired to signalize Himself toward the end of his life. Without doubt He manifested his love for men during his whole life, since He performed for them such admirable works from the very first instant He was conceived in my womb by the Holy Ghost. But towards the end of his life, when He established the evangelical law of the New Testament, the fire of ardent love which burned in his bosom burst out in more consuming flames. On this last occasion the charity of the Savior for the children of Adam exerted its full force, since it was urged on by the sorrows of death which encompassed Him (Ps. 114:3), and was spurred on from the outside by the dislike of men for suffering, their self-chosen misfortunes, and their boundless ingratitude and perversity in seeking to destroy his honor and life, He who was ready to sacrifice all for their eternal happiness. By this conflict his love was inflamed to the point at which it could not be extinguished (Cant. 8:7), and thus being now about to leave the earth He was driven to exercise all his ingenuity in attempting to prolong his benefactions and interactions with men, leaving among them, by his teachings, works and examples, the sure means of participating in the effects of his divine charity.

466. In this art of loving thy neighbor for the sake of God I desire thee to be very expert and zealous. This thou shalt be if the very injuries and sufferings with which they afflict thee awaken in thee greater love. Thou must remember that then alone shalt thou be secure and unwavering when neither benefits nor flatteries of men have any effect on thee; for loving those who do thee good, though it is a duty, yet thou canst not know (if thou art heedless) whether in that case thou lovest them for the sake of God or for the benefits they confer, which would be loving thy own advantage or thyself rather than thy neighbor for the sake of God. Whoever loves for other ends or motives of flattery does not know the love involved in charity, since he is yet taken up with the blind love of his own ease. But if thou dost love those who do not satisfy any of these cravings,* then thou hast as motive and principal object the Lord himself, loving Him in his creatures whoever they may be. Because thou must exercise both the corporal and spiritual works of mercy, yet hast fewer occasions to exercise those of the body than those of the spirit, thou must continually extend thy spiritual works of charity, multiplying according to the will of thy Savior thy prayers, petitions, and pious practices, accompanying them with prudent and holy admonitions, and thus advancing the spiritual welfare of souls. Remember, my Lord and Son conferred no bodily blessings on anyone without accompanying them with spiritual blessings, and it would have derogated from the divine perfection of his works to perform them without this plenitude of goodness. From this thou shalt understand how much we must prefer the benefits of the soul to those of the body, and hence thou must always seek them in the first place, although earthly-minded men blindly prefer temporal blessings, forgetting the eternal ones and those tending toward the friendship and grace of the Most High.

467. The virtues of humility and obedience were highly exalted by the conduct of my most holy Son in washing the feet of his Apostles. If by thy interior enlightenment concerning this extraordinary example thou dost not humble thyself to the dust, thy heart is indeed hardened and thou art very obtuse in the knowledge of the Lord. Let it then be understood henceforth thou canst never consider or profess thyself sufficiently humbled, even when thou dost find thyself despised and trodden under foot by all men, sinners as they are, for they can never be as bad as Judas, or thou as good as thy Lord and Master. But to merit and to be honored by this virtue of humility shall give thee such perfection and worthiness that thou shalt deserve the name of a spouse of Christ and make thyself somewhat like unto Him. Without this humility no soul can be raised to excellence and communication with the Lord, for the exalted must first be humbled, and only the lowly ones can and should be exalted (Mt. 23:12); and souls are always raised up by the Lord in proportion to how they have humbled and annihilated themselves.

468. In order to not lose this pearl of humility just at the time when thou dost imagine thyself secure of it, remember that the exercise of it is not to be preferred to obedience, nor must thou practice it merely according thy own will, but in subjection to thy superiors; for if thou prefer thy own judgment to that of thy superiors, even if thou do it under the color of humility, thou art guilty of pride, for that would not only be refusing to seek the lowest place, but placing thyself above thy superior. Hence thou mayest understand the error of shrinking back, like St. Peter, from the favors and blessings of the Lord, depriving thee thereby not only of the gifts and treasures offered to thee but of the advantage of humility which thou dost seek and which is much preferable; moreover, thou wouldst also fail in gratefully acknowledging the high ends and the exaltation of his holy Name which the Lord seeks in such works. It is not thy business to enter into the examination of his secret and exalted judgments, nor to correct them by thy reasonings and thy objections by which thou mayest think thyself unworthy of his favors or incapable of performing the works enjoined. All this is a seed of the pride of Lucifer, covered up by apparent humility, since he thus seeks to hinder the communications of the Lord, his gifts, and his friendship which thou dost desire so much. Let it then be to thee an inviolable rule that as soon as thy confessors and superiors approve of certain favors and blessings as coming from the Lord thou accept them as such with due gratitude and reverence. Do not allow thyself to be led into new doubts and vacillating fears, but correspond with the favors of the Lord in humble fear and tranquil obedience.
